Handwoven Arts

The handwoven bags were produced by the indigenous women of the Iban tribes from the Longhouse communities in efforts to increase and improve their living income. These Longhouse communities are prominent in the Mukim Labi and Mukim Melilas from the Belait District as well as Mukim Amo from the Temburong District. It is a traditional handicraft previously made with rattan and bamboo strips. Although now, in attempts to modernise the handicraft, the bags are now made with coloured plastic strips to make it more contemporary and sustainable design used to improve the durability and make it appealing to the public.
